In the Southern Hemisphere

Chile is a narrow and vast country that is nothing but the succession of opportunities enclosed between the Andes Mountain Range and the Pacific Ocean; natural barriers that preserve the health of the land and its products. This is a generous land with a diversity of landscapes, both diverse and beautiful.

Chile is committed to become the main innovation center of Latin America and, above all, it has the human talent that makes everything possible.

In the fertile Central Valley of Chile it is possible to find the perfect conditions for seed production. Long days and wide thermal variation along with dry and warm days during the growing season, with irrigation provided by the waters of Los Andes Range are some of the major characteristics. These particular features also result in Chile's excellent plant health conditions. The best professionals and technicians work in the best fields, making Chile your best partner in the southern hemisphere.

ANPROS, The Chilean Seed Association, includes 74 members among producers, distributors, traders and researchers in the seed business. Founded in 1959, it represents more than 98% of the Chilean seed industry; its mission is to contribute to the progress and development of Chilean agriculture, representing all of its associates within all matters concerning to the seed industry at a national and international level, promoting its sustainability.

The core of the Association is the work of its committees. They are grouped around the production of the main seeds produced in the country: corn, vegetables, canola and sunflower; the cross-cutting issues are equally relevant, like intellectual property, biotechnology, trade, phytosanitary issues and breeding.

Chilean Seed Exports 1980-2020 (MMUS$)

Chile is the first seed exporter of southern hemisphere and the eighth worldwide.

ANPROS has developed an innovative web platform for the distribution of seed fields.

The ANPROS Isolation System, renowned worldwide, allows the production of seeds with the highest quality standard.

At international level ANPROS has an active role within the main representatives of the industry, being active member of ISF, SAA and APSA.

Chile is also member of the main regulatory bodies of the seed industry: OECD, AOSCA, IPPC, ISTA and UPOV.
